

HITLER BECOMES SUPREME POWER AS VON HINDENBURG, 86, DIES EARLY TODAY

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Editor's Note—President Roosevelt is now in the "execution" phase of his Administration. Powers greater than those given to any other peace-time President are his. General policies have been formulated. And approximately one year has passed for those policies to be tested. Now is the period of execution. In order to gauge the execution phase of the New Deal, the Merry-Go-Round will publish from time to time intimate studies of the unique and most important projects under the Roosevelt Administration, including the Tennessee Valley project, Subsidized Homesteads, the PWA, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, etc. The first, given below, deals with the new homestead project near Reedsville, W. Va.

West Virginia Subsistence Farms Are Utopia for Alleghany Mountaineers

ARTHURDALE, W. VA.—On the dirt road that runs south from Reedsville you would have noticed about a year ago an old-fashioned gable house reminiscent of Poe's dreary tale, "The Fall of the House of Usher." It looked down rather scornfully upon a desolate area lost in scrub oak, underbrush and swamp known locally as "Mr. Arthur's Place."

Drive around that same turn of the road today and you will come upon a cluster of new-built white houses. There are trim terraced lawns in front of them, women hanging out clothes in the rear, a flock of chickens carefully cooped away from the new grass on the terrace, a man, perhaps a cultivator through hills of beans, another standing shoulder high in a cornfield which has replaced the swamp and the scrub oak, and children far up on the hillside picking berries in the underbrush which has not yet retreated before the inroads of this Roosevelt program of reclaiming men from economic swamps once as desolate as those surrounding "Mr. Arthur's Place."

The gabled house is still there. But without its somber surroundings, it has taken on an almost cheery look. And the name of the place is now recorded as "Arthurdale, W. Va."

National Experiment

Officially Arthurdale is a Subsistence Homestead project of the Interior Department. Unofficially, and perhaps to the largest number, it is known as "Mrs. Roosevelt's pet." Its significance, however, goes far beyond the connotation of any name. For it is, in a sense, a laboratory in which is being tested the all-important question of whether the drouth-sufferers of the Northwest can be profitably moved to new farms; whether the perennially unemployed coal-miners of the Alleghenies can be transplanted to new industry; whether large blocks of unemployed and economically mal-adjusted people can be picked up and resettled in more propitious areas without disrupting their own lives and the life of the affected locality.

Indicative of the importance of this experiment is the fact that the world is passing by to judge it. Some 10,000 visitors, through Arthurdale monthly to see this display-piece tacked on the wall of the New Deal.

What they see on the surface is a cozy group of fifty white houses, interspersed in uncrowded intervals over 250 acres, each house having four to five rooms, and a garden plot of five acres.

What they learn on the surface is that each house is equipped with its own well, an electric pump, hot and cold running water, a cellar and central heating.

Details Yet to Be Learned Locally, Claim

An appropriation of $1,972 had been made to Pickaway-co today by the state relief commission in its program to aid unemployed "white-collar" workers in Ohio.

Approximately $110,000 was appropriated for use in August alone to create employment for thousands of needy professional and "non-manual" workers in the state.

The program here will be handled by Howard S. Irwin, county relief director, with the workers expected to come from the rolls in the National Re-employment office. James T. Shea, manager of the local office, reports that he has several hundred unemployed professional men listed in his office.

68 GET BENEFIT

Sixty-eight counties were given individual appropriations to carry on the program, which is expected to create jobs for about 9,000 persons.

Projects on which the now unemployed "white-collar" workers will be employed include, planning, public welfare, health, recreation, education, arts, and statistical surveys, general clerical work and technical supervision of all other works division projects.

A maximum working week of five seven-hour days was set with the rate of payment a minimum of $2.50 per day.

Workers eligible for employment, it was said, include unemployed attorneys, abstractors, accountants, actors, agents, architects, artists, assayers, authors, bookkeepers, cashiers, chemists, clerks, collectors, credit men, decorators, dentists, designers, draftsmen, editors, engineers, inspectors, inventors, librarians, metallurgists, musicians, office assistants, osteopaths, photographers, reporters, research workers, surveyors, teachers, telephone operators, trained nurses, veterinary surgeons, and typists.

An attempt will be made to employ all persons in their special line of work, it was said.

Surrounding counties and their appropriations included Delaware, $60; Logan, $258; and Madison, $112.

Stabber In New Attack

Defiance Again in Terror As Woman is Struck; Makes Getaway.

DEFIANCE, Aug. 2.—The phantom knife-wielder, who terrorized Defiance more than two months ago by a series of attacks on women and girls, today had appeared to stab Mrs. Ethel Endsley, 20, of Bryan, and make his escape before vigilantes could be called out.

Mrs. Endsley, a housekeeper here, was attacked as she walked across the Auglaize River bridge here with Miss Edna Stitsel, 17. The slasher made no attempt to harm the girl but fled after stabbing Mrs. Endsley.

2 NEWSPAPERMEN AGAIN IN JAIL

Carty and Durham Continue to Decline Information; Laffoon's Hands Tied.

DANVILLE KY., Aug. 2.—Wesley Carty and Jack Durham, reporters who refused to reveal a newspaper confidence in police court here, were sentenced today to another six hours in jail.

Late this afternoon they will be jailed again before Judge Jay Harlan, who yesterday assessed $3 fines each after keeping them in jail during their normal working hours. Today's sentence runs from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Governor Ruby Laffoon meanwhile in reply to a protest from the American Newspaper Guild indicated he lacked authority to interfere in a contempt of court case.

The impasse developed when the reporters declined to tell the court their source of advance information that State Representative J. Sterling Towles was to be hanged in effigy in the courthouse yard.

SPANGLER BACKED

It was announced in Columbus Thursday that William I. Spangler, Tarkenton, and George M. Morris, of Bartley, had been endorsed for the Democratic nomination for state senator from the 10th district by the Franklin-co Democratic Executive committee.

Two are to be selected at the primaries to oppose Paul Gingham and Robert Pfeiffer, both of Columbus, the present Republican incumbents.

The 10th district includes Franklin and Pickaway-cos.

Judge Roy H. Williams, of Sandusky, a candidate for the supreme court, was a visitor here Thursday.

Only Few Have Entered Contest; $950 Available

From the surprising small number who have entered the Herald's "Salesmanship Club" to date one would think the first prize was a little red wagon of a pair of roller skates, instead of $500 in cash.

It is hard to believe that real cash would go begging, but this is almost literally the case in the "Salesmanship Club." The way things stack up now, someone is going to have easy pickings. A sum of $950 will be distributed in the campaign among those who take part, but so far the number who have entered is negligible. Just why the marked indifference to the proposition is hard to understand, but it is evident that the plan of the campaign is not fully understood.

OPPORTUNITY GREAT

The fact that only a few have entered makes the opportunity greater for anyone who wishes to cash in on their spare time in a big way. Everyone who enters the campaign and abides by the rules will be paid for their efforts.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES PLANS TO CONVERGE TWO SEWERS

Project, Leading Eventually to Sewage Disposal Plant, Would Be Presented to FERA; Smith Ditch Also Discussed; Many Problems Handed to Finance Committee.

Council, with two members, C. O. Leist and F. A. Marion absent, participated in varied business transactions Wednesday evening with one of the highlights being the request of Service Director William Justice that the city prepare some projects to be presented to the FERA authorities.

The leading project, one that would provide many man-hours of labor, would be a sewer bringing together sewage systems from the south end and the north end at a spot on the Scioto river where a sewage disposal plant would ultimately be erected, probably at a later date.

This subject was discussed for quite a while but no definite action taken.

Improvement of the Smith ditch, south of the city, was also presented for discussion with the council Wednesday.

'HILL' QUARREL FATAL TO TWO

Woman, 40, Son, 19, Killed By Drink-crazed Man In Belmont-Co.

SHADYSIDE, Aug. 2.—A fight between two hill clans in this eastern Ohio village today had resulted in the violent deaths of two persons.

Mrs. John Jablonka, 40, and her son, John, Jr., 19, were shot and killed, according to police, by drink-crazed Leonard Fuller, 42. The latter is held pending filing of definite charges.

Authorities recounted that Jablonka, with his family, drove up in front of the Fuller home and started an argument. Mrs. Fuller, according to allegations, advised them to continue the argument.

"My husband's drunk and he's got a gun," she was alleged to have threatened.

Fuller, as a tragic climax to the quarrel, whipped out the gun and fired twice. The mother and son were fatally wounded. After the shooting, Fuller went to a neighbor's home, called village Marshal Joseph Truax and surrendered.

Councilman Dan Ryan reported that a council concerning the waste water from the creamery. One, he said, would be to construct a sewer intersecting the sanitary sewer through the Mason field; an other to connect with the High-st sewer, and a third to connect with the Court-st sewer. Council will handle the expense of Mr. Griner's drawing profiles and estimates on the most advisable method.

AUDITOR ARRESTED ON CHECK CHARGE

VAN WERT, Aug. 2.—County Auditor Clarence C. Judkins, a Republican seeking re-election, today was under arrest on charges of forging a check for $296.

When arraigned on a warrant, he pleaded not guilty and was released under $300 bond pending a hearing in a justice of the peace court August 15.

Meanwhile, County Prosecutor John L. Miller indicated that he may call a special session of the grand jury next Wednesday to seek an indictment against the auditor.

Judkins was accused of forging the check which was payable to the Van Wert Daily Bulletin, a newspaper.

DEATH COMES TO LEADER OF KAISER'S ARMY

German Nation Enters State of Mourning at News of Demise

FAMILY BESIDE HIM

Dies 20 Years After Greatest Battle

NEUDECK, Germany, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—Death softly closed the eyes of Germany's revered war leader and president, Paul von Hindenburg, at his ancestral estate near here today.

The end came at 9 a. m. (3 a. m. Circleville time).

For hours before the 86-year old warrior's end he had been in a state of coma while the best medical talent in Germany strove to halt the advances of a complication of diseases.

Members of Hindenburg's family were at his bedside when death occurred.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the watchers realized that a change had occurred. Then at 9:15 the blue and white flag of the president's family was lowered to half mast and all knew that the end had come.

All the bells of the surrounding villages and of the little town of Frevstadt nearby tolled the death knell. Mourning flags appeared in the windows, and the whole population flocked into the street, some weeping at the news of the president's death.

At 10:30 a detachment of the Third Infantry arrived from the nearby garrison of Eylan to take over the honorary guard duties at Neudeck manor.

20 YEARS TODAY

His death came 20 years to the day after the first Russian troops crossed into German territory and the first German troops entered northern France.

CLARK TRIAL SET MONDAY

Former Ashville Man Charged With Having Part in Ashville Crimes.

Judge J. W. Adkins said Thursday that Glenn "Spiky" Clark, former Ashville resident late of Columbus, will go on trial Monday morning charged with participating in a series of Ashville robberies climaxed by the holdup of Frank Morrison, grocer.

Clark pleaded not guilty to a grand jury's indictments and is held in default of bond. He is represented by Emmett L. Crist appointed by the judge since Clark is without funds to employ counsel.

Carroll Loudon, of Miami-co, pleaded guilty to five charges growing out of the Ashville jobs, and has been sentenced to the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield. He is expected to testify against Clark and against Jess Friley's whose trial is scheduled for August 8. The latter is represented by Arthur W. Wiles of the Columbus law firm, Hamilton and Kramer.

Judge Adkins has not set any other criminal trial cases but probably will as soon as two men indicted by the grand jury have been arraigned.

MRS. RINEHART DIES

Mrs. Mary L. Rinehart, 41, related to a number of Pickaway-co persons, died Wednesday in Chillicothe. The funeral will be Friday at the Fawcett funeral home in that city at 2 p. m.

Surviving are: her husband, Floyd E. Rinehart; ten children and five sisters and eight brothers among whom are Mrs. Ralph Davis and Mrs. Doshie Large, Yellowbud; Mrs. Bertie Ater, New Holland; Thurman Large, Williamsport; John and Harvey of Yellowbud; Chester, this city, and Ernest Large of New Holland.

FORMER CORPORAL IN ARMY HOLDS UNFETTERED POWER

Cabinet Gives Hitler Right to Change Constitution which He Does; Will Name Assistant, Either Goebbels or Hess, to Handle Part of Duties; Oath of Allegiance is Taken.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—At 9 o'clock this morning, the very moment that President Paul von Hindenburg died, Adolf Hitler, once an obscure lance-corporal in Hindenburg's armies, took over the helm of the German nation, succeeding Hindenburg in the presidential office.

The cabinet, meeting in extraordinary session last night, had decreed that the succession should pass at the exact minute that the warrior-president died.

Hitler, retaining his full powers as chancellor and leader of Germany's powerful and only political party, the Nazis, is now master of the fatherland's army, naval and civil administration. In short he is the complete unfettered boss of the nation.

To emphasize Hitler's new status as commander-in-chief of the army, General Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, ordered all branches sworn in immediately to allegiance to the Chancellor-President.

TEXT DISCLOSED

The text of the oath follows: "I swear this holy oath to God that I will unconditionally obey Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer (leader) of the German reich and nation and supreme commander of the army and navy and will be ready as a brave soldier to sacrifice my life at any time for the sake of this oath."

Announcement that Hitler had assumed the presidency, merging the two offices of Reichschancellor and Reichspresident into one as forecast by International News Service Tuesday when President von Hindenburg's serious condition became known, was made by Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Text of Dr. Goebbels' announcement follows: "The cabinet decided yesterday on the following law regarding the head of the state: 'Paragraph I.—The office of the Reichspresident shall be united with that of Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler who will appoint his deputy.'" stag to meet such emergencies, empowers Hitler to appoint a deputy who probably will lift some of the duties from the chancellor's back. It is believed Hitler will make the appointment immediately after the great state funeral decreed for Von Hindenburg.

"Paragraph II.—This law is effective with the death of President von Hindenburg."

"The law has been signed by the chancellor and all members of his cabinet."

Either Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and Hitler's right-hand man, or Rudolf Hess, acting Nazi party leader, is expected to get the post. Nation-wide mourning for Von Hindenburg was ordered today as flags were quickly half-staffed throughout the third Reich, church bells began tolling and millions offered up prayers for the repose of his soul. The army was ordered into mourning for two weeks, the three "Hindenburg" regiments with which he had served to remain in mourning for a fortnight.

All public activities have been suspended and private business throughout the nation will be suspended on the day of the funeral, the date for which has not yet been fixed.

While flags were flung out all over Berlin milling crowds gathered at all government buildings, particularly in Wilhelmstrasse. There were thousands in front of the presidential palace, standing silently, gazing at the half-staffed flag floating lazily in the morning breeze. But there was a larger crowd in front of the chancellery prepared to give Hitler an ovation when he left.

TROOPERS PARADE

For the first time since the ban was lifted on their public appearances the brown-uniformed Nazi storm troopers paraded up Unter Den Linden and trooped their colors in front of the war memorial where ceremonies were being held throughout the day in commemoration of the twentieth anniversary of the outbreak of the World War.

nounced the news to a waiting world read.

"The Reich's President General Field Marshal Von Hindenburg passed into eternity this morning at 9 o'clock."

It was learned that the aged president (he would have been 87 had he lived until his birthday, October 5) did not regain consciousness after slipping into a deeper coma at about 5 o'clock this morning.

His two daughters, Irmgard (Frau Von Brockhausen) and Anna Marie (Frau Von Pentz) also were in the room with him when he died.

Earlier in the morning the doctors had issued a bulletin which showed the nation that the end could not be far off. It read:

"The general weakness is increasing. A new state of unconsciousness is starting."

The announcement of the president's death broke up the largest death watch in postwar history. More than 100 newspapermen gathered about the manor house rushed to their lines of communications to flash the news to the world.

The grief of the president's servants who had been with him for years was obvious. They emerged from the house weeping.

HITLER IN CHARGE

Immediately after the announcement of the president's death came the radio broadcast from Berlin telling the nation that Hitler had assumed the president's high office and was retaining his own as well.

The watchers speculated whether the president had made Hitler his political heir in the deathbed meeting of the two yesterday afternoon when Hitler flew here and was closeted with Hindenburg for a short time.

President Von Hindenburg had been progressively weakening from a chronic weakness for the past two months. He was troubled by a condition of the prostate gland which led to bladder and kidney complications and finally to a toxic condition in which he lapsed into unconsciousness.

In spite of his weakened condition and the painful treatments it necessitated (he had two male nurses in constant attendance) he had carried on the affairs of state almost up to the end.

Only on Monday he had held an important interview.

His death came as the entire nation was observing the actual beginning of Germany's participation of the war by praying for the war dead, and Hindenburg hovering between life and death was first in the nation's prayers.

Thousands on their way to work this morning had stopped into the churches to pray for their great man, in whom above all men, they placed their faith.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the church bells all were ringing, and the people knew that on this day, the nation's scroll of honored dead, contained a new name, that of Reich's President Field Marshal Paul Ludwig Hans Von Beneckendorf Und Von Hindenburg.

NEAR BATTLEFIELD

He died only about 50 miles from the battlefield where he turned back and almost obliterated the invading Russian hordes and saved Germany from defeat in the early days of the war, Tannenberg.

Observers thought that in his semi-conscious hours he again walked the Masurian lake district which was to be that battlefield, where in 1911, 64 years old, retired because of age and official disfavor, he walked and planned an imaginary battle for the salvation of the fatherland.

No great captain in history ever died under such trying conditions. Painful as it was, Napoleon's lingering death at St. Helena was untroubled compared with that of Hindenburg's.

Only eight days ago the problem of the murder of Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria was brought to him, and Hindenburg knew that Germany would be blamed for it by the world.

He dispatched a letter of condolence to President Miklas of Austria, the sincerity of which no one questioned. It was all he could do to extricate his country from its unenviable position.

Only a month ago, in the middle of his illness, Hitler's emissaries came to ask his help in the Nazi government's predicament, after the brutal killings throughout the Reich on June 30.

HELPED HITLER

A word from President Hindenburg was necessary to justify it all. The people would believe Hindenburg duty to the state came above all things. The state would have to be saved from any enemies that beset it. In spite of the fact that the killings included the adjutant of his personal representative in the government, Hubert Von Bose, aide to Vice Chancellor Franz Von Papen, Hindenburg gave the word. He sent a telegram to Hitler congratulating him on saving the state. It was emblazoned on the first pages of the newspapers and Hitler was secure.

YOUTH IN DENIAL

NORMAN, Okla., Aug. 2.—Defense preparations for Neal Myers, 21-year old pharmacy student charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Marian Mills, University of Oklahoma beauty queen, went forward today as the youth remained in the Cleveland-co jail without bond awaiting preliminary hearing set for Saturday.

W. P. Morrison, former state senator, who will head a battery of three lawyers engaged to defend Myers, declined to outline the youth's probable defense, but said Neal would continue to steadfastly maintain his innocence of any responsibility for the death of the girl, who died following a purported attempt to thwart motherhood.

"We shall be prepared for the preliminary hearing Saturday," Morrison said. "We don't know what the state will do, but we will meet the issues, whatever they are. The boy has declared he had nothing to do with the girl's death or the circumstances leading up to it, and we shall proceed on that basis."

UNDERWOOD TALKS AT CHILLICOTHE

Declaring that the "New Deal" was no longer a theory, but an established fact; admitting that it might be necessary to alter modify or change certain parts of the program, Congressman Mel G. Underwood of the 11th District, in an address delivered at Chillicothe last night, gave a graphic picture and portrayal of the conditions that confronted the Roosevelt Administration. In addition he presented a picture of what has already been done by President Roosevelt and the Democratic Congress to relieve these conditions and of the future program facing the next Congress.

Mr. Underwood said, "The legislation enacted into law and the other accomplishments of the Roosevelt Administration, mark the dawn of a new era in the struggle for human progress. It marks the rebirth of the principle in which we all believe, that human rights are above prosperity rights."

"Under the Roosevelt Administration" said Mr. Underwood, "we have saved the homes and farms of our people from the auction block. We have made an honest and sincere effort to solve the problems of bankrupt farmers. We have fed the hungry. We have tried to protect the youth of our land, our citizens of tomorrow, by our conservation camps. By federal regulation, we have controlled the wild speculation which ruined lives and lost homes and farms."

The congressman was in this city Thursday morning calling on party leaders and other friends.

Death In Speeding Cars

INTERESTING light on the relation of speed to motor car accidents is supplied in the results of a study made by the California highway patrol. The survey, made by Chief E. Raymond Cato, included a five-year period.

It proved conclusively, Chief Cato said in his report, that speed is "the dominant influence in California motor vehicle fatalities." If this is the case in California the same thing would be true in Ohio and other states.

In the five years covered by the study, there were 158,004 serious traffic accidents. A total of 11,988 persons met death in them and 213,859 were injured.

This represents a high price to pay for speeding.

"It has been found after an experience of five consecutive years," said Chief Cato in his report, "that seldom if ever is there a death in a traffic accident that involves a collision of vehicle traveling 20 miles an hour or less. . . . The great majority of fatalities are known to happen to vehicles colliding at speeds in excess of 45 miles per hour. . . . At high speeds, practically everyone in the car may be killed."

These conclusions were not reached exclusively on the basis of the figures collected by the patrol in its survey. Experiments were conducted for further evidence. For one month on a highway in San Mateo county, every speeding car was stopped and its driver forced to keep within what the officers regarded as safety limits. Not a single death during the month occurred, although previous to the experiment that road had been the scene of several fatalities. A boulevard was selected for the other experiment. All speed limits were removed. The change was immediate and disastrous. The boulevard became a death lane at once. The test, therefore, was abandoned almost as soon as it got under way.

The California survey seems to point the way to lowering our highway death rate. Will the lesson be applied?

Proxy Candidates

WOMEN have a legitimate place in politics.

It must be admitted, though, that politics has not yet been refined and elevated and cleansed as the advocates of women suffrage predicted would be the case when the campaign for the franchise was in swing. Just as many crooks, it seems, are in office now as ever was the case. Just as dirty practices are followed by those who make politics a business. The general situation has undergone no observable material improvement.

There are some women who have made valuable contribution to public service. There are others whose activities have been of the opposite kind.

Comes the report from North Dakota that Mrs. William Langer, wife of the deceased governor, plans to seek the governorship herself in vindication of her husband.

If Mrs. Langer can find no better platform on which to run or higher reasons for wanting the office, we think she would be doing her sex a greater service by staying out. Women as proxy candidates for their husbands don't seem to meet the requirements by which service should be measured. Candidates for office—men or women—should have definite ideas of their own; certainly, they ought to have higher motives than that of winning offices on the policies of a discredited official convicted of a crime.

THE LOWE WOLFSON by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XL

In some chagrin Lanyard crossed to the window-doors. Black night pricked with a myriad of man-made stars and defeated eyes keyed to indoor illumination. He pushed the wings farther apart and stepped out. But the dusky terrace with its array of outdoor furniture and plants in tubs drenched all deserted.

He lost a minute there, less in disappointment or disconcert than in marveling on the sight that opened beyond the ruled black lip of the parapet, the spangled spread of urban night, patterned in lights like a vast shield, infernally lurid at its midtown boss with lines of fading gleam radiating in untraceable confusion to the far shimmer of its broken silver rim. And to every light that burned below, a hundred hearts that beat in love and sorrow, despair and hope.

And somewhere, near one of them, his son and, perhaps, Fenno. With a gesture of frustration Lanyard turned back, only halting to peer up to the parapet of Isquith's terrace.

THE LOWE WOLFSON

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XL

In some chagrin Lanyard crossed to the window-doors. Black night pricked with a myriad of man-made stars and defeated eyes keyed to indoor illumination. He pushed the wings farther apart and stepped out. But the dusky terrace with its array of outdoor furniture and plants in tubs drenched all deserted.

He lost a minute there, less in disappointment or disconcert than in marveling on the sight that opened beyond the ruled black lip of the parapet, the spangled spread of urban night, patterned in lights like a vast shield, infernally lurid at its midtown boss with lines of fading gleam radiating in untraceable confusion to the far shimmer of its broken silver rim. And to every light that burned below, a hundred hearts that beat in love and sorrow, despair and hope.

And somewhere, near one of them, his son and, perhaps, Fenno. With a gesture of frustration Lanyard turned back, only halting to peer up to the parapet of Isquith's terrace.

A glow beyond made this last a dense black mass—and proved, or seemed to prove, that the tenant of the upstairs premises was at home.

And Tess Boyce, no doubt, up there with him. No telling what they were scheming, between them, or how or when their designs would manifest in action!

Time to have another try for Crane by telephone; but Lanyard, moving quickly back to the drawing-room, was halted short of it by a little shake of throaty laughter in the hush overhead.

He stepped quickly aside and out of the light shed by the windows.

In another breath something plopped on the tiles at his feet, fell and rested just inside the edge of the stencil of light.

The shagreen-bound case of the Habsburg emeralds!

Something else fell from immediately above; Wally's head the next instant, but only to his ears—a feminine cry of vexation.

"I've gone and dropped the damn thing!"

"Well, don't worry." The amused injunction was unmistakable, by its mannered accent, Isquith's. "You'll find it down there, all right, waiting for you."

"I know. But it makes me mad. I'm all the time dropping things. Why is it?"

"Your amazing nervous energy, little one, your impatience that is always trying to make a gesture do instead of a finished performance. Never mind; you have virtues that make up for your failings."

"Sterling qualities, then—if you must quibble."

"That's more like it. I thought for a minute you were trying to make up to me. Gave me quite a turn."

"It ought to—when or if ever. Easy now! Don't go romping down that ladder as if it was a staircase. If you let go of that, butterfingers, next thing you know they'll be scraping you up off the Avenue with a trowel!"

"Not a chance. I think more of my life than I do of any mess of jewels."

"But give a thought to me, dear. If you break your pretty neck, you know, I can always get another sweetie, but I'm apt to go all the rest of my life without another shot at the Habsburg emeralds."

"You don't have to tell me. That's the way it is with you men, always—selfish beasts! Just for that, I'm going to keep tight hold and dispart you!"

The diffused light picked up silken ankles upon a spidery iron ladder that linked the terraces at a point to one side of the windows—between two of which hugging the wall like a lizard, Lanyard waited.

The shagreen case now lay, not where it had first fallen, but squarely in the middle of the lighted area—far enough away to minimize the risk of her becoming aware of its presence, there in the darkness, when she paused to retrieve it.

"All very entertaining, my dear, I'm sure." The light satiric key betrayed how well Isquith fancied himself as the most polished of swell mobsmen. "But persiflage is a trifle out of place just now, don't you think, when we haven't got time to do our stuff in; when we've got less than half of it left, as a matter of fact, and no end of things to see to before morning? Shake a leg, won't you, like a good little girl?"

"Shaking two of them, aren't I? And fine ones, if anyone should ask you."

The Boyce finished her descent, and with a clatter of pointed heels, passed so near to Lanyard that her garments all but brushed him.

"All right; you needn't have your heart in your mouth any more, ducky—I'm down, safe and sound."

"And the emeralds?"

The woman in a twinkling located the shagreen case, and in one swift swoop possessed herself of it.

"O. K.!" she gayly called to the man above—cutting a slightly shapeless, the milk, alluring and well aware of it, with the lamplight from indoors softening the garish scheme of a cynically insufficient negligee.

But as Lanyard viewed her, it was all beauté du diable, no better. And when he heard what she said next, he told himself he could have throttled her where she stood without one qualm of conscience.

"Fair enough," Isquith called down. "But cut out that show-girl stuff, now, gorgeous; keep it for tomorrow, when this mess is all cleared up and everybody's happy but the families of the candidates for premature decease. Get busy with the wires—give Ladore a buzz and tell him to stand prepared to pay up like a prince first thing in the morning and take his old emeralds. What becomes of them after that's his business, tell me; it's yours, so far as we're concerned, it's nobody's."

"Leave him to me—I'll put him through the hoops, all right. He'll learn an awful lot about playing with two-edged tools before he's many days older. That's my job. Just see that you tend to yours as well; put the infant class to by-by—and don't be soft-hearted about it."

"Who? Me? Listen: Those kids are going to take a ride so long that they won't know where they are when they're over. By-oh!"

Isquith, having retreated from the parapet at once, for the woman barely sketched a farewell wave to him, and smiling contentedly to herself as she hugged the jewel-case to her bosom, went on to her own quarters.

The filmy train of her negligee, sweeping the floor, had yet to follow her in when Lanyard stepped aside to the foot of the ladder and started to swarm up it.

Still on its rung, he warily halted, nose level with the ledge, to spy out the lay of the upper story.

Warm light, filtered through draperies translucent but not transparent, to show an empty terrace. Three long wide windows overlooked it, the wings of the middle one ajar but narrowly—nobody showed in the glimpse given of a rich interior. Voices from within were audible, but not what they were saying; the drone of the radio below was too strong, even at that distance.

It was without more delay, then, at that juncture when the least delay was chancy, that Lanyard tumbled in over the parapet and darted to stand against the pier between the open window and another. Thus established, he could clearly hear Isquith on the telephone, and in a temper, his careful voice of custom discarded, his diction destitute of its usual elegance.

"That you, Sherry?" he was testily inquiring. "Where have you been all night? This is the 'steenth time I've tried to get you."

He was briefly silent, then cut in, snarling:

"Ah-h, can it, can it! What do I care what the big alibi is? If you birds had handled your end with anything like human intelligence, the jam you've put us all in couldn't never have happened. Anyway, you'd ought to have had brains enough to be where I could get in touch with you any minute, the way things are breaking. You've lost me so much time as it is that it's an even bet you've cooked the show, and we'll all be on parade in the line-up downtown tomorrow. Listen: You've got to get a hearse at the door here inside half an hour. . . . No, a bus—limousine or sedan. It don't make no difference which, so long as it can't be traced back to us when it's fished out of Long Island Sound, if ever."

He paused briefly, to hear what the other had to say, giving Lanyard time to tell himself that a conversation of such frankness between criminals could hardly be held except over a leased private wire, unconnected with any central. Then, having evidently been promised what he wanted, for his tone was a moderately mollified one, Isquith resumed:

"Yeh—we've found them; or rather, they found themselves for us. You'd never guess where, if I gave you a thousand chances. Why, right here in my apartment—waiting for me to come home! That's right—asking for it! Wally was with them. He's sitting right here as me now, the dumb cluck. . . . Seems the punk jumped him as soon as they were alone, over there in the bucket of blood—snatched his rod off him and made him lead the way to where the shot was. Then the two of them threw the fear into the poor mutt till he caved and did what they wanted—called that girl in off the floor-desk and stood by with both flippers flapping, perfectly helpless, while they shoved her into the closet. Then they marched him out and down the service stairs and out to the street the back way, timing the act so a person'd think they knew in advance the minute when Fowler was due to be bumped off in the Haymow. Anyway, that was the time they picked—when everyone was running around like chickens with their heads off and not paying any attention—that's how they made the get-away without anybody getting wise. . . . Smart youngsters? I'll say so."

Once again the speaker paused long enough to get the sense of a query.

"Why, then, it seems, they edged Wally into a taxi and told the donkey to drive up through the Park while they held a pow-wow. The fool had been spilling the beans—you know, bragging, like he always does when he gets his nose wet—and had let that key to the apartment here. So the Lanyard kid doped it out that the way to get the emeralds back was to come here and lay for me, figuring that whoever had them would come in and hand them over as soon as I landed—just like it happened. He wanted the girl to go home and wait there while he turned the trick, but she wouldn't hear of it. She's nuts about the punk, according to Wally, and said she wasn't going to take any chances of Wally's pulling a comeback on him while the two of them were waiting for me, all alone here. She insisted on coming along to spell her sweetie, standing guard over Wally while he rested."

"They made themselves at home here, told my servant, when he turned up today, it was a false alarm about my coming back and sent him packing—ordered up what they wanted from a restaurant and kept Wally covered in the bedroom while the waiters were in the place—never let him out of their sight a second. It wasn't until dinner tonight he could stage the comeback. He knew where I kept my pills and managed to lay hands on them and slip a couple into the coffee. When I came in, the two kids were out cold. They still are—doing a Rip van Winkle that looks like it would last a week."

"Now it's up to you to get that car here; then we'll lug them out and into it as plain drunks; the rest's your business. What? Say, what good would this place be to me if I didn't have every last rat on the staff on my pay-roll? I could get away with murder here if I had to; but it would mess up the premises too much; and when it comes to taking mugs for rides, you're the expert—Wait a shake, will you?"

Isquith broke off at this stage to look round in resentful wonder as Tess Boyce, flinging the wings of the window wide and herself in through them, offered a dramatic interruption.

"What the devil!"

Biliousness Is Warning Of Trouble

Not a Disease, but a Symptom; Find the Underlying Cause

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

"BILIOUSNESS" is a commonly accepted term applied to a disturbance of the intestinal tract. Speaking in general terms, this is a fairly accurate location of the seat of trouble. Yet the underlying cause of the symptoms often can be traced to nervous strain, undue excitement, fear, anxiety or apprehension. Sometimes it goes back to some eye disorder or strain, here the wearing of proper glasses may lead to prompt recovery.

Dr. Copeland

In reality the word "bilious," as we use it, refers to a digestive disturbance caused by an interference in the normal functioning of the liver and gall bladder. It is really a set of symptoms and not a disease. But it is an annoying and uncomfortable affliction.

The sufferer complains of severe headaches, dizziness, nausea, vomiting. Spells of indigestion and loss of appetite are other uncomfortable signs of the trouble.

How to Treat It

During an acute attack the patient should be kept as quiet as possible. Food should not be given until the intestinal tract is thoroughly cleared. For this purpose a soap and water enema should be given. No laxatives or other drugs should be taken unless prescribed by the physician.

To relieve the tension and nervous fatigue apply warmth to the extremities. A warm bath is often of great benefit. If necessary a sedative may be given. Warm drinks and of appetite are other uncomfortable signs of the trouble.

After the acute attack has subsided every effort should be made to determine the underlying cause. Often faulty bowel elimination is a factor. This permits absorption of poisons from the intestines. These toxins or poisons are sufficient to cause a marked irritation of the nervous system. For this reason every necessary measure should be taken for the relief of intestinal sluggishness.

Regular eating hours and proper chewing of food are important. The diet should be simple and nutritious. Include in the daily menu an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables. Drink six to eight glasses of water every day, preferably between meals.

Plenty of sleep, relaxation and a moderate amount of exercise are of great benefit. Get outdoors as much as possible and obtain your full share of fresh air and sunlight. If possible avoid undue mental excitement.

Persons who are susceptible to bilious attacks should consult with the family physician. A thorough physical examination may reveal some abnormality. If corrected, this will prevent further attacks.

A MARIAN MARTIN FROCK FOR VACATION OR SCHOOL

PATTERN 9082

If you are of the kind of woman who believes in "preparedness" and acts on her beliefs, now is the time to give thought to frocks for the first days of school. Here is a delightful pattern with which to start the good work. It boasts a cunning yoke and pleated sleeves cut in one—fewer seams for you to close and terribly smart. The pleat up the back is borrowed from the adult mode and gives additional freedom. A nice mode for cotton or chills. A contrasting color may be used for the collar, yoke and sleeves.

THE HERALD SALESMANSHIP CLUB - Circleville, Ohio

Straw-board, Oils to Meet; Givens Win From Purina

One of the most important games of the second half schedule is booked for the Southern Ohio Electric Co. field this evening when the Container Corporation opposes the Circleville Oils. A victory for the straw-boarders would tie up things in the loop because the Oils have not been defeated while several other teams have lost only one game.

It is expected Manager Roy Norris of the straw-board will use Bill Hegele on the mound with a possibility that Al Baker will be used. Hegele is the probable choice, however. The Container outfit will present its full strength with H. Strawser catching, Trimmer on first, Whaley second, Stevens shortstop, G. Brungs third base, Brannon left field, Watson center field and W. Brungs right field.

KEEP SAME LINEUP
Co-managers George Crum and Dorthy Courtwright will use their same lineup in an endeavor to continue the Oil victory march. Purcell will pitch, Robinson catch, Geib first base, Merriman second, Steele shortstop, Walker third base, Barnes left field, H. White center field, and Leroy Moore right field.

Friday evening the Containers will play the Mecca restaurant in a postponed game.
The Givens Oils continued their winning streak Wednesday evening knocking off the Purina Chows with seven runs in the second inning. The score was 7 to 1.
Bob Jones was as usually effective for the Oils giving only seven hits and scattering those. The Purina run came in the fourth inning.

The seven runs scored in the second were the result of a walk, two hits, an infield error, two more hits, a walk, two more hits, and a wild throw.
The Oils laid back on their oars to protect their lead.

HOLLAND IS STAR
Purina presented a new outfielder Wednesday evening who really looked keen. It was Chuck Holland who patrolled the left field zone like a veteran. He also looked pretty good with the stick.
Charlie Scott and Frank Lynch umpired.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

ONE THING VERY NOTICEABLE in Wednesday evening's ball game between the Givens Oils and the Purina Chows was that not a single new ball was thrown into play at any time during the game. There is a league rule that a new ball should be put in by each team each game, but that has been waived since the balls have been standing punishment pretty well. However, no team should expect a ball to be usable for three games—those used Wednesday were just plain 'punks'.

We want to hand a bunch of posies to Chuck Holland, who turned in some of the nicest out-fielding it has been our pleasure to see this year—This youth, who totes them from the portside and also swings that way, made one of the prettiest plays of the year when he snagged a low line drive with one hand in short left center field—Recreation ball fans should give Chuck Holland a good hand for his play—We hope it continues.

Some news from the Chillicothe front—It concerns Deb Kovan, former Ohio State football player, who has signed with the Louisville club of the newly-organized American pro grid league—Kovan expects to play with Father Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech-Portland griddier, who is to coach the Louisville aggregation. Other teams in the league are expected to be St. Louis Gunners, Memphis Tigers, Tulsa Indians, Atlanta, Birmingham, Miami and New Orleans.

COACH ROY MILLER, HILLSBORO mentor for the past five years, has resigned his job to go to Fostoria, succeeding Bill Edwards, who becomes assistant to Sam Willaman at Western Reserve—Miller is a former Wittenberg star—He is reported to be receiving a nice increase in salary in his new position.

BIRDS WIN DUEL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 2.—The fourth-place Columbus Red Birds continued to swing along the American Association highway in a victory stride today after defeating St. Paul yesterday, by a 2 to 1 score.

With the win, the Birds won their fourth straight victory and counted their eighth win out of 11 contests played during the current home stay.

They also closed the gap between themselves and Milwaukee in third place. The Brewers now are only one half a game ahead of Columbus. The latter team was to meet St. Paul again today, weather permitting.

During the Civil war, some of the soldiers' uniforms were made of shoddy. The term then came into general use for describing anything that was inferior or adulterated.

Uncle Sam's "Devil's Island" Ready for Guests

Uncle Sam's proposed "Devil's island" for dangerous criminals is almost ready for its guests. Situated in the broad Bay of San Francisco, surrounded by sheer cliffs and buffeted by strong tidal currents, Alcatraz island, site of the U. S. army's prison, has had a thorough housecleaning. Last year, when the wave of kidnapping caused government authorities to counter-attack, U. S. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings cast about for an escape-proof prison to house convicted gangsters, and found that Alcatraz island suited the needs. It was donated to the U. S. department of justice.

ROWE AND HARDER TO TANGLE TODAY

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—Two of the best pitchers in the American league were to face each other at League park here today as the Cleveland Indians attempted to even their present series with the Tigers and avenge yesterday's 10 to 7 defeat.

The pair of hurlers are Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the 22-year-old right-hander who has won his last ten games, and Melvin Harder, whose winning streak now stands at nine.

Rowe yesterday put a stop to what looked like a thrilling finish to a listless baseball game. With the Tigers ahead 8 to 2 in the middle of the seventh, the "never-say-die" Indians pounded across three runs in their half of the frame, and though Detroit collected two in the eighth, so did the Tribe.

Then, in the last half of the ninth, after Seeds fled out, Clarence Phillips walked, Rice and Averill and allowed Vasmick to single the bases were loaded and a home run would have won the game, so Mickey Cochrane signaled for his star to save the day.

Hal Trosky faced the big youth first with a home run, a double and two singles already on his day's record. But Trosky struck out and Hale, another dangerous threat, did likewise.

The Cleveland boys made 14 hits but they left 16 runners on the bases. The pitching of Willis Hudlin, Belve Bean and Oral Hildebrand was not up to the par of Luke Hamlin, Phillips and Rowe, so the Tigers walked away with the contest and, incidentally, moved up into the first position in the league standings.

4 CROP CONTROL METHODS NOW USED

No Other Types of Plans Are Suggested By A. A. A. Planners.

There seem to be four possible methods of keeping the 15 or 20 million acres of averaged land out of crop production required for a balanced harvest, according to the planning division of the A. A. A. These were listed recently by H. R. Tolley, chief of the division, before a group of farm people in Illinois.

The first method is the voluntary adjustment plan with the benefit payments to assure an advantage to the cooperator over the non-cooperator, he said. This is the plan now being followed with wheat, tobacco, corn and hogs.

ARE VOLUNTARY

A second method is voluntary adjustment with disadvantages to those who refuse to cooperate. This is the plan now being followed with rice, through marketing agreements with millers. Under this plan, the millers hold back part of the fixed minimum price for the farmer's rice if he does not agree to take part in the adjustment program.

A device similar to this is contained in the Kerr Bill, which would tax tobacco marketed by non-cooperators. This plan, however, would be accompanied by continued benefit payments to cooperators.

Government buying of sub-marginal land is a third possible method. But, said Mr. Tolley, it would take an enormous amount of time to acquire the land required to affect commercial production adequately. There is also the problem of moving those people who wish to move, to lands rich enough to maintain them in reasonable economic security.

LIENSE OR TAXATION

Compulsory control of production was the fourth method mentioned by Mr. Tolley. This might be license or taxation, he said, adding, "The Bankhead Act limiting the ginnings of cotton uses the taxation principle and provides for assigning a quota to every producer of cotton. While every producer of cotton has the right to produce as much as he wants, the plan is now being given a trial."

"But there is no reason," Mr. Tolley concluded, "to abandon the voluntary principle in the rest of the country, implementing it with the centralizing power of the government."

Home Helps

Questions and Answers

So many people have purchased automatic refrigerators this season that the care and use of their refrigerators is frequently on their minds. This time we'll answer some of the questions that are asked most often.

How often should I defrost my refrigerator?

The instructions that come with your refrigerator will describe the thickness of the frost that may accumulate before it interferes with refrigeration. For a regular household task, defrosting once each week is recommended for greatest efficiency. When you defrost, the icy material melts off the chilling unit, and washes away the food odors that have accumulated on the frost. Regardless of the type of refrigerator you have, the chilling unit absorbs moisture from foods and withdraws odors from the foods as well. An ordinary washing, or soda rinse will not entirely remove these odors, but defrosting and rinsing will.

Must all foods placed in an automatic refrigerator be covered?

Yes, all foods that do not have their own protective covering, should be covered. Leftovers may be placed in refrigerator dishes, or in glass jars with wide-mouthed tops. Waxed paper is very convenient to use for covering foods, and meats should be placed on waxed paper and covered with another layer of waxed paper to prevent their drying out. The practice of covering foods is unquestioned by many housewives who would not think of storing foods regardless of the cold, without covering.

How can I make frozen pop sticks in my own refrigerator? My youngsters like them, but I don't understand how to freeze them.

The frozen pop is made very much like ice cubes, pouring "pop" in the tray of the refrigerator, with the dividing sections in. If longer than single cube size suckers are desired use the deep dessert tray without the horizontal division. Freeze until mushy, then insert small wooden skewers into each cube. Replace tray in chilling unit with space for the tray above empty to allow skewers to fit in. Freeze until solid. Loosen the sucker from the tray as you do ice cubes, running cold or warm water over the inverted tray.

How often should a porcelain lined refrigerator be cleaned?

It is impossible to be too clean about any storage space for food. If there is any food or liquid spilled in your refrigerator, wipe it up immediately. A weekly cleaning is advisable, using soapy water, if you desire, and rinsing carefully with clean water in addition to a soda rinse. Dry the inside of the refrigerator with a dry tea towel so that there is no additional moisture left in the box.

Refreshing Beverages

Sugar syrup is better for sweetening summer beverages than sugar. Make it by using equal quantities of sugar and water and boiling them gently for about 8 minutes. Use it for iced tea, fruit punches, and most any chilled drink.

Fruit Fizz

4 oranges
2 lemons
1/2 C. pineapple juice
1/2 C. maraschino cherries with juice
4 pts. sparkling white grape juice

Combine the juice of the oranges and lemons, add pineapple juice and the cherries and their juice. Chill until time of serving. Then add white grape juice. Pour over ice cubes in tall glasses. Makes 2 1/4 quarts.

Blackberry Punch

1/2 C. boiling water
1/2 Tbsp. tea
1/2 C. sugar
1 C. blackberry juice

2 Tbsp. lemon juice
2 Tbsp. orange juice
Few grains salt
1 pt. charged water or ginger ale

Pour boiling water over tea, let stand 5 minutes, then strain over sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. When cold add fruit juices. Pour into glasses containing ice cubes, garnish with lemon and orange slices and dilute with ginger ale or charged water.

HITLER BECOMES SUPREME POWER AS VON HINDENBURG, 86, DIES EARLY TODAY

Editor's Note—President Roosevelt is now in the "execution" phase of his Administration. Powers greater than those given to any other peacetime President are his. General policies have been formulated. And approximately one year has passed for those policies to be tested. Now is the period of execution. In order to gauge the execution phase of the New Deal, the Merry-Go-Round will publish from time to time intimate studies of the unique and most important projects under the Roosevelt Administration, including the Tennessee Valley project, Subsistence Homesteads, the PWA, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, etc. The first, below, deals with the new homestead project near Reedsville, W. Va.

West Virginia Subsistence Farms Are Utopia for Alleghany Mountaineers

ARTHURDALE, W. VA.—On the dirt road that runs south from Reedsville you would have noticed about a year ago an old-fashioned gable house reminiscent of Poe's dreary tales, "The Fall of the House of Usher." It looked down rather scornfully upon a desolate area lost in scrub oak, underbrush and swamp known locally as "Mr. Arthur's Place."

Drive around that same turn of the road today and you will come upon a cluster of new-built white houses. There are trim terraced lawns in front of them, women hanging out clothes in the rear, a flock of chickens carefully cooped away from the new grass on the terrace, a man pushing a cultivator through hills of beans, another standing shoulder high in a cornfield which has replaced the swamp and the scrub oak, and children far up on the hillside picking berries in the underbrush which has not yet retreated before the inroads of this Roosevelt program of reclaiming men from economic swamps once as desolate as those surrounding "Mr. Arthur's Place."

The gabled house is still there. But without its somber surroundings, it has taken on an almost cheery look. And the name of the place is now recorded as "Arthurdale, W. Va."

National Experiment

Officially Arthurdale is a Subsistence Homestead project of the Interior Department. Unofficially, and perhaps to the largest number, it is known as "Mrs. Roosevelt's pet."

Its significance, however, goes far beyond the connotation of any name. For it is, in a sense, a laboratory in which is being tested the all-important question of whether the drouth-sufferers of the Northwest can be profitably moved to new farms; whether the perennially unemployed coal-miners of the Alleghenies can be transplanted to new industry; whether large blocks of unemployed and economically mal-adjusted people can be picked up and resettled in more propitious areas without disrupting their own lives and the life of the affected locality.

Indicative of the importance of this experiment is the fact that the world is passing by to judge it. Some 10,000 visitors through Arthurdale monthly to see this display-piece tacked on the wall of the New Deal.

What they see on the surface is a cozy group of fifty white houses, interspersed in uncrowded intervals over 250 acres, each house having four to five rooms, and a garden plot of five acres.

What they learn on the surface is that each house is equipped with its own well, an electric pump, hot and cold running water, a cellar and central heating.

'WHITE COLLAR' IDLE NAMED IN NEW U. S. PLAN

Appropriation of $1,972 Announced for County by Commission

OCCUPATIONS LISTED

Details Yet to Be Learned Locally, Claim

An appropriation of $1,972 had been made to Pickaway-co today by the state relief commission in its program to aid unemployed "white-collar" workers in Ohio.

Approximately $110,000 was appropriated for use in August alone to create employment for thousands of needy professional and "non-manual" workers in the state.

The program here will be handled by Howard S. Irwin, county relief director, with the workers expected to come from the rolls in the National Re-employment office. James T. Shea, manager of the local office, reports that he has several hundred unemployed professional men listed in his office.

68 GET BENEFIT

Sixty-eight counties were given individual appropriations to carry on the program, which is expected to create jobs for about 9,000 persons.

Projects on which the now unemployed "white-collar" workers will be employed include, planning, public welfare, health, recreation, education, arts, and statistical surveys, general clerical work and technical supervision of all other works division projects.

A maximum working week of five seven-hour days was set with the rate of payment a minimum of $2.50 per day.

Workers eligible for employment, it was said, include unemployed attorneys, abstractors, accountants, actors, agents, architects, artists, assayers, authors, bookkeepers, cashiers, chemists, clerks, collectors, credit men, decorators, dentists, designers, draftsmen, editors, engineers, inspectors, inventors, librarians, metallurgists, musicians, office assistants, osteopaths, photographers, reporters, research workers, surveyors, teachers, telephone operators, trained nurses, veterinary surgeons, and typists.

IN SPECIAL WORK

An attempt will be made to employ all persons in their special line of work, it was said.

Surrounding counties and their appropriations included Delaware, $60; Logan, $258; and Madison, $112.

DEFIANCE, Aug. 2.—The phantom knife-wielder, who terrorized Defiance more than two months ago by a series of attacks on women and girls, today had reappeared to stab Mrs. Ethel Endsley, 20, of Bryan, and make his escape before vigilantes could be called out.

Mrs. Endsley, a housekeeper here, was attacked as she walked across the Auglaize River bridge here with Miss Edna Stitsel, 17. The slasher made no attempt to harm the girl but fled after stabbing Mrs. Endsley.

2 NEWSPAPER MEN AGAIN IN JAIL

Carty and Durham Continue to Decline Information; Laffoon's Hands Tied.

DANVILLE, Ky., Aug. 2.—Wesley Carty and Jack Durham, reporters who refused to reveal a newspaper confidence in police court here, were sentenced today to another six hours in jail.

Late this afternoon they will be jailed again before Judge Jay Harlan, who yesterday assessed $3 fines each after keeping them in jail during their normal working hours. Today's sentence runs from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Governor Ruby Laffoon meanwhile in reply to a protest from the American Newspaper Guild indicated he lacked authority to interfere in a contempt of court case.

The impasse developed when the reporters declined to tell the court their source of advance information that State Representative J. Sterling Towles was to be hanged in effigy in the courthouse yard.

SPANGLER BACKED

It was announced in Columbus Thursday that William I. Spangler, Tarleton, and George M. Morris, of Bexley, had been endorsed for the Democratic nomination for state senator from the 10th district by the Franklin-co. Democratic Executive committee.

Two are to be selected at the primaries to oppose Paul Gingham and Robert Pfeiffer, both of Columbus, the present Republican incumbents.

The 10th district includes Franklin and Pickaway-co.

JUDGE WILLIAMS HERE

Judge Roy H. Williams, of Sandusky, a candidate for the supreme court, was a visitor here Thursday.

Only Few Have Entered Contest; $950 Available

From the surprising small number who have entered the Herald's "Salesmanship Club" to date one would think the first prize was a little red wagon or a pair of roller skates, instead of $500 in cash.

It is hard to believe that real cash would go begging, but this is almost literally the case in the "Salesmanship Club." The way things stack up now, someone is going to have easy pickings. A sum of $950 will be distributed in the campaign among those who take part, but so far the number who have entered is negligible. Just why the marked indifference to the proposition is hard to understand, but it is evident that the plan of the campaign is not fully understood.

OPPORTUNITY GREAT

The fact that only a few have entered makes the opportunity greater for anyone who wishes to cash in on their spare time in a big way. Everyone who enters the campaign and abides by the rules will be paid for their efforts.

Adolf Hitler, who today announced himself president-chancellor of the German republic, and Paul Von Hindenburg, war hero and president, who died early this morning, are shown above.

COUNCIL DISCUSSES PLANS TO CONVERGE TWO SEWERS

Project, Leading Eventually to Sewage Disposal Plant, Would Be Presented to FERA; Smith Ditch Also Discussed; Many Problems Handed to Finance Committee.

Council, with two members, C. O. Leist and F. A. Marion absent, participated in varied business transactions Wednesday evening with one of the highlights being the request of Service Director William Justice that the city prepare some projects to be presented to the FERA authorities.

The leading project, one that would provide many man-hours of labor, would be a sewer bringing together sewage systems from the south end and the north end at a spot on the Scioto river where a sewage disposal plant would ultimately be erected, probably at a later date.

The subject was discussed for quite a while but no definite action taken.

Improvement of the Smith ditch, south of the city, was also presented for discussion with the council.

CADY GETS $146.80—Mayor W. R. Cady reported to council that he collected during July $146.80. The report was heartily received by council and placed on file.

The council's finance committee, headed by Councilman Ben Gordon, is due for a lot of work after a number of propositions were placed in the hands of this committee Wednesday.

Safety Director L. T. Shaner asked $300 to purchase coal for Berger hospital and $200 for the incidental account of the police department. Both these items were referred to the finance committee.

The matter of securing necessary funds to cover expenses of the engineer, Harry Griner, was also referred to the finance group.

Councilman Dan Ryan reported that a council committee had visited the Pickaway creamery concerning waste from that plant and had referred the matter to the engineer to suggest the best plan to take care of the waste water. Ryan also stated that the committee had visited the J. W. Eschelman and Son mill and that R. D. Musser, general manager, had promised to take care of waste water from that plant as soon as possible.

Mr. Griner submitted his report to council concerning the best method of handling the waste water from the creamery. One, he said, would be to construct a sewer intersecting the sanitary sewer through the Mason field; another to connect with the High-st sewer, and a third to connect with the Court-st sewer. Council will handle the expense of Mr. Griner's drawing privileges and estimates on the most advisable method.

AUDITOR ARRESTED ON CHECK CHARGE—VAN WERT, Aug. 2. County Auditor Clarence C. Judkins, a Republican seeking re-election, today was under arrest on charges of forging a check for $228.

When arraigned on a warrant, he pleaded not guilty and was released under $300 bond pending a hearing in a justice of the peace court August 13.

Meanwhile, County Prosecutor John L. Miller indicated that he may call a special session of the grand jury next Wednesday to seek an indictment against the auditor.

Judkins was accused of forging the check which was payable to the Van Wert Daily Bulletin, a newspaper.

DEATH COMES TO LEADER OF KAISER'S ARMY

German Nation Enters State of Mourning at News of Demise

FAMILY BESIDE HIM

Dies 20 Years After Greatest Battle

NEUDECK, Germany, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—Death softly closed the eyes of Germany's revered war leader and president, Paul Von Hindenburg, at his ancestral estate near here, today.

The end came at 9 a. m. (3 a. m. Circleville time).

For hours before the 86-year old warrior's end he had been in a state of coma while the best medical talent in Germany strove to halt the advances of a complication of diseases.

Members of Hindenburg's family were at his bedside when death occurred.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the watchers realized that a change had occurred. Then at 9:15 the president's family was lowered to half mast and all knew that the end had come.

All the bells of the surrounding villages and of the little town of Prevestadt nearby tolled the death knell. Mourning flags appeared in the windows, and the whole population flocked into the street, some weeping at the news of the president's death.

At 10:30 a detachment of the Third Infantry arrived from the nearby garrison of Eylan to take over the honorary guard duties at Neudeck manor.

20 YEARS TODAY

His death came 20 years to the day after the first Russian troops crossed into German territory and the first German troops entered northern France.

The official bulletin which announced his death said:

CLARK TRIAL SET MONDAY

Former Ashville Man Charged With Having Part in Ashville Crimes.

Judge J. W. Adkins said Thursday that Glenn "Spiky" Clark, former Ashville resident late of Columbus, will go on trial Monday morning charged with participating in a series of Ashville robberies climaxed by the holdup of Frank Morrison, grocer.

Clark pleaded not guilty to a grand jury's indictments and is held in default of bond. He is represented by Emmitt L. Crist, appointed by the judge since Clark is without funds to employ counsel.

Carroll Loudon, of Miami-co, pleaded guilty to five charges growing out of the Ashville jobs, and has been sentenced to the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield. He is expected to testify against Clark and against Jess Friley, whose trial is scheduled for August 8. The latter is represented by Arthur W. Willes of the Columbus law firm, Hamilton and Kramer.

Judge Adkins has not set any other criminal trial cases but probably will as soon as two men indicted by the grand jury have been arraigned.

Rinehart, ten children and five sisters and eight brothers among whom are Mrs. Ralph Davis and Mrs. Doshie Large Yellowbud; Mrs. Bertie Ater, New Holland; Thurman Large, Williamsport; John and Harvey of Yellowbud; Chester, this city, and Ernest Large of New Holland.

FORMER CORPORAL IN ARMY HOLDS UNFETTERED POWER

Cabinet Gives Hitler Right to Change Constitution which He Does; Will Name Assistant, Either Goebbels or Hess, to Handle Part of Duties; Oath of Allegiance is Taken.

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—At 9 o'clock this morning, the very moment that President Paul Von Hindenburg died, Adolf Hitler, once an obscure lance-corporal in Hindenburg's armies, took over the helm of the German nation, succeeding Hindenburg in the presidential office.

The cabinet, meeting in extraordinary session last night, had decreed that the succession should pass at the exact minute that the warrior-president died.

Hitler, retaining his full powers as chancellor and leader of Germany's powerful and only political party, the Nazis, is now master of the fatherland's army, naval and civil administration. In short he is the complete unfettered boss of the nation.

To emphasize Hitler's new status as commander-in-chief of the army, General Werner Von Blomberg, minister of war, ordered all branches sworn in immediately to allegiance to the Chancellor-President.

TEXT DISCLOSED

The text of the oath follows: "I swear this holy oath to God that I will unconditionally obey Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer (leader) of the German rich and nation and supreme commander of the army and navy and will be ready as a brave soldier to sacrifice my life at any time for the sake of this oath."

Announcement that Hitler had assumed the presidency, merging the two offices of Reichschancellor and Reichspresident into one, forecast by International News Service Tuesday, when President Von Hindenburg's death was announced, was made by Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in a nation-wide radio broadcast.

Text of Dr. Goebbels' announcement follows: "The cabinet decided yesterday on the following law regarding the head of the state:

"Paragraph I—'The office of the Reichspresident shall be united with that of Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler who will appoint his deputy.'"

"Paragraph II—'This law is effective with the death of President Von Hindenburg.'"

"The law has been signed by the chancellor and all members of his cabinet."

This law, declared in effect by simple cabinet decree under the legislation passed by the Reich (Continued on Page Two)

Death In Speeding Cars

INTERESTING light on the relation of speed to motor car accidents is supplied in the results of a study made by the California highway patrol. The survey, made by Chief E. Raymond Cato, included a five-year period.
It proved conclusively, Chief Cato said in his report, that speed is "the dominant influence in California motor vehicle fatalities." If this is the case in California the same thing would be true in Ohio and other states.
In the five years covered by the study, there were 158,004 serious traffic accidents. A total of 11,988 persons met death in them and 213,959 were injured.
This represents a high price to pay for speeding.
"It has been found after an experience of five consecutive years," said Chief Cato in his report, "that seldom if ever is there a death in a traffic accident that involves a collision of vehicle traveling 20 miles an hour or less... The great majority of fatalities are known to happen to vehicles colliding at speeds in excess of 45 miles per hour... At high speeds, practically everyone in the car may be killed."
These conclusions were not reached exclusively on the basis of the figures collected by the patrol in its study. Experiments were conducted for further evidence. For one month on a highway in San Mateo county, every speeding car was stopped and its driver forced to keep within what the officers regard as safety limits. Not a single death during the month occurred, although previous to the experiment that road had been the scene of several fatalities.
A highway was selected for the other experiment. All speed limits were removed. The change was immediate and disastrous. The boulevard became a death lane at once. The test, therefore, was abandoned almost as soon as it got under way.
The California survey seems to point the way to lowering our highway death rate. Will the lesson be applied?

The well dressed German probably has added bullet-proof vests to his wardrobe.

Proxy Candidates

WOMEN have a legitimate place in politics. It must be admitted, though, that politics has not yet been refined and elevated and cleansed as the advocates of women suffrage predicted would be the case when the campaign for the franchise was in swing. Just as many crooks, it seems, are in office now as ever was the case. Just as dirty practices are followed by those who make politics a business. The general situation has undergone no observable material improvement.
There are some women who have made valuable contribution to public service. There are others whose activities have been of the opposite kind.
Comes the report from North Dakota that Mrs. William Langer, wife of the deceased governor, plans to seek the governorship herself in vindication of her husband.
If Mrs. Langer can find no better platform on which to run or higher reasons for wanting the office, we think she would be doing her sex a greater service by staying out. Women as proxy candidates for their husbands don't seem to meet the requirements by which service should be measured. Candidates for office—men or women—should have definite ideas of their own; certainly, they ought to have higher motives than that of winning offices on the policies of a discredited official convicted of a crime.

Kansas moonshiners are complaining that the heat is causing their mash to turn to virgins. This probably will mean higher prices for legitimate liquor.

"THE LONE WOLF" SON
by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XL

In some chagrin Lanyard crossed to the window-doors. Black night pricked with a myriad of man-made stars met and defied eyes keyed to indoor illumination. He pushed the wings farther apart and stepped out. But the dusky terrace with its array of outdoor furniture and plants in tubs drowned all deserted. He lost a minute there, less in disappointment or disconcertation than in marveling on the sight that opened beyond the ruled black lip of the parapet, the spangled spread of urban night, patterned in lights like a vast shield, infernally lurid at its midtown boss with lines of fading gleam radiating in untraceable confusion to the far shimmer of its broken silver rim. And to every light that burned below, a hundred times the heat in love and sorrow, despair and hope.
And somewhere, near one of them, his son and, perhaps, Fenno. With a gesture of frustration Lanyard turned back, only halting to peer up to the parapet of Isquith's terrace.
A glow beyond made this last a dense black mass—and proved, or seemed to prove, that the tenant of the upstairs premises was at home! And Tess Boyce, no doubt, up there with him. No telling what they were scheming in lights like a vast shield, infernally lurid at its midtown boss with lines of fading gleam radiating in untraceable confusion to the far shimmer of its broken silver rim. And to every light that burned below, a hundred times the heat in love and sorrow, despair and hope.
Time to have another try for Fenno by telephone; but Lanyard, moving quietly back to the drawing-room, was halted short of it by a little shake of the head and a hush overhead.
He stepped quickly aside and out of the light shed by the windows.
In another breath something plopped on the tiles at his feet, fell and rolled inside the edge of the stencil of light.
The shagreen-bound case of the Habsburg emeralds!
Something else fell from immediately above Lanyard's head the next instant, but only to his ears—a faint cry of vexation.
"I've gone and dropped the damn' thing."
"Well, don't worry." The amused injunction was unmistakably, by its mannered accent, Isquith's. "You'll find it there, all right, waiting for you."
"I know. But it makes me mad. I'm all the time dropping things. Why is it?"
"Your amazing nervous energy, little one, your impatience that is always trying to make a gesture do instead of a finished performance. Never mind; you have virtues that make up for your failings."
"I've got what?"
"Sterling qualities, then—if you must puzzle." Isquith said.
"That's more like it. I thought for a minute you were trying to make up to me. Gave me quite a turn."
"It ought to—when or if ever. Easy now! Let go romping down that ladder as if it was a staircase. If you let go of that, butterfingers, next thing you know they'll be scraping you up off the Avenue with a trowel."
"Not a chance. I think more of my life than I do of any mess of jewels."
"But give a thought to me, dear. If you break your pretty neck, you know, I can always get another sweetie, but I'm apt to go all the rest of my life without another shot at the Habsburg emeralds."
"You don't have to tell me. That's the way it is with you men, always—selfish beasts! Just for that, I'm going to keep tight hold and disappoint you."
The shagreen light picked up silken ankles upon a spidery iron ladder that linked the terraces at a point to one side of the windows—between two of which hugging the wall like a lizard, Lanyard waited.
The shagreen case now lay, not where it had first fallen, but squarely in the middle of the lighted area—far enough away to minimize the risk of her becoming aware of his presence, there in the darkness, when she paused to retrieve it.
"All very entertaining, my dear. I'm sure." The light satiric key betrayed how well Isquith fancied himself as the most polished of swell mobsmen. "But persiflage is a trifle out of place just now, don't you think, when we haven't got all night to do our stuff in; when we've got less than half of it left, as a matter of fact, and no end of things to see to before morning? Shake a leg, won't you, like a good little girl."

"Shaking two of them, aren't I? Fine ones, if anyone should ask you."
The Boyce finished her descent, and with a clatter of pointed heels, passed so near to Lanyard that her garments all but brushed him.
"All right; you needn't have your head in your hands and me, ducky—I'm down, safe and sound."
"And the emeralds?"
The woman in a twinkling located the shagreen case, and in one swift swoop possessed herself of it. "No, I. I. she gayly called to the man above—cutting a slightly shape against the mink, alluring and well aware of it, with the lamplight from indoors softening the garish scheme of a cynically insufficient negligee.
But as Lanyard viewed her, it was all beauté du diable, no better. And when he heard what she said next, he told himself he could have throttled her where she stood without one qualm of conscience.
"Fair enough," Isquith called down. "But cut out that shagreen stuff, now, gorgeous; keep it for tomorrow, when this mess is all cleared up and everybody's happy but the families of the candidates for premature decease. Get busy with the wires—give Ladore a buzz and tell him to stand prepared to pay up like a prince first thing in the morning and take his old emeralds. What becomes of them after that's his business, tell him; any way, so far as we're concerned, it's nobody's."
"Leave him to me—I'll put him through the hoops, all right. He'll learn an awful lot about playing with two-edged tools before he's many days older. That's my job. Just see that you 'tend to yours as well; put the infant class to bed by—"
"And don't be soft-hearted about it."
"Who? Me? Listen: Those kids are going to take a ride so long that they won't know where they are when they're over. By-oh-by—Isquith must have retreated from the parapet at once, for the woman barely sketched a farewell wave to herself as she hugged the jewel-case to her bosom, went on into the night, and the door closed.
The filmy train of her negligee, sweeping the tiles, had yet to follow her in when Lanyard stepped aside to the foot of the ladder and started to swarm up it.
Edgy now! Let go romping down that ladder as if it was a staircase. If you let go of that, butterfingers, next thing you know they'll be scraping you up off the Avenue with a trowel."
"Not a chance. I think more of my life than I do of any mess of jewels."
"But give a thought to me, dear. If you break your pretty neck, you know, I can always get another sweetie, but I'm apt to go all the rest of my life without another shot at the Habsburg emeralds."
"You don't have to tell me. That's the way it is with you men, always—selfish beasts! Just for that, I'm going to keep tight hold and disappoint you."
The shagreen light picked up silken ankles upon a spidery iron ladder that linked the terraces at a point to one side of the windows—between two of which hugging the wall like a lizard, Lanyard waited.
The shagreen case now lay, not where it had first fallen, but squarely in the middle of the lighted area—far enough away to minimize the risk of her becoming aware of his presence, there in the darkness, when she paused to retrieve it.
"All very entertaining, my dear. I'm sure." The light satiric key betrayed how well Isquith fancied himself as the most polished of line-up downtown tomorrow. Listen: You've got to get a hearse at the door here inside half an hour. No, bus—limousine or a—Jan. It don't make no difference which, so long as it can't be traced back to us when it's fished out of Long Island Sound, if ever." He paused briefly, to hear what the other had to say, for Lanyard time to tell himself that a conversation of such frankness between criminals could hardly be held except over a leased central. Then, having evidently been promised that he wanted, for his tone was a moderately mollified one, Isquith resumed:

"Yeh—we've found them; or rather, they found themselves for us. You'd never guess where, if I gave you a thousand chances. Why, right here in my apartment—waiting for me to come home. That's right—asking for it! Wally was with them. He's sitting right beside me now, the dumb cluck. . . . Seems the punk jumped him as soon as they were alone, over there in the back of blood-splattered his rod off him and made him lead the way to where the skirt was. Then the two of them threw the fear into the poor mutt till he caved and did what they wanted—called that girl in off the floor-desk and stood by with his fingers flapping, pumped helpless, while they moved her into the closet. Then they marched him out and down the service stairs and out to the street back way, timing the act so a person'd think they knew in advance the minute when Fowler was due to be bumped off in the Haymow. Anyway, that was the time they picked—when everyone was running around like chickens with their heads off and not paying any attention—that's how they made the get-away without anybody noting wise. . . . Smart youngsters, I'll say so."
Once again the speaker passed long enough to get the sense of a query.
"Why, then, it seems, they edged Wally into a taxi and told the donkey to drive up through the Park while they held a pow-wow. The fool had been spilling the beans—you know, bragging, like he always does when he gets his nose wet—and had let on that he was waiting for me to come to the apartment here. So the Lanyard kid doped it out that the way to get the emeralds back was to come here and lay for me, figuring that whoever had them would come in and hand them over as soon as I landed. Like it happened. . . . I wanted the girl to go home and wait there while he turned the trick, but she wouldn't hear of it. She's nuts about the punk, according to Wally, and said she wasn't going to take any chances. . . . Wally's pulling a comeback on him while the two of them were waiting for me, all alone here. She insisted on coming along to spell her sweetie, standing guard over Wally while he rested. . . . They made themselves at home here, told my servant when he came to get my things, that they wanted to stay, and kept Wally covered in the bedroom while the waiters were in the place—never let him out of their sight a second. It wasn't until dinner tonight he could stage the comeback. He knew where I kept my pills and managed to lay hands on them and slip a couple into the coffee. When I came in, the two kids were out cold, still as stone, and I saw a Rip van Winkle that looks like it would last a week. . . . Now it's up to you to get that car here; then we'll lug them out and into it as plain drunks; the rest's your business. What? Say, what good would it place be to me if I didn't have every last rat on the staff on my pay-roll? I could get away with murder here if I had to; but it would mess up the premises too much; and when it comes to taking mugs for rides, you're an expert—Wait a shake, will you?"
Isquith broke off at this stage to look round in resentful wonder as Tess Boyce, flinging the wings of the window wide and herself in through them, offered a dramatic interruption.
"What the devil!"

Biliousness Is Warning Of Trouble
Not a Disease, but a Symptom; Find the Underlying Cause

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

Dr. Copeland

"BILIOUSNESS" is a commonly accepted term applied to a disturbance of the intestinal tract. Speaking in general terms, this is a fairly accurate location of the seat of trouble. Yet the underlying cause of the symptoms can often be traced to nervous strain, undue excitement, fear, anxiety or apprehension. Sometimes it goes back to some eye disorder or strain; here the wearing of proper glasses may lead to prompt recovery.

During an acute attack the patient should be kept as quiet as possible. Food should not be given until the intestinal tract is thoroughly cleared. For this purpose a soap and water enema should be given. No laxatives or other drugs should be taken unless prescribed by the physician.

Regular eating hours and proper chewing of food are important. The diet should be simple and nutritious. Include in the daily menu an abundant supply of fresh fruits and vegetables. Drink six to eight glasses of water every day, preferably between meals.

Persons who are susceptible to bilious attacks should consult with a physician. A thorough physical examination may reveal some abnormality. If corrected, this will prevent further attacks.

KNOW YOUR CANDIDATES

Two 39-year-old World War veterans, who grew up on Jackson-twp farms and later became interested in the law enforcement business, are battling it out for the Democratic nomination for sheriff just as they did four years ago. They are Charles H. Radcliff and John "Doggy" Ward, Jr.

Radcliff is the present sheriff, having held office since January, 1931, while Ward, who was a deputy sheriff under Frank Davis, has been engaged in law enforcement work for the state, Ohio, during the past three and one-half years.
Here are sketches of the two candidates:
CHARLES H. RADCLIFF—Age 39, 121 W. Franklin-st. born March 26, 1895, son of John F. and Ida Radcliff. He attended Jackson-twp school and during the World War enlisted and became a sergeant in the 603rd Engineers headquarters company, spending a year in France. Upon returning from the war, became interested in farming, but in 1924 accepted a job with the Standard

Oil Co. He was later named manager of the Pickaway-co Cream Cooperative Association, holding this position six and one-half years. He was nominated and elected sheriff in 1930 and was re-elected in 1932. Mr. Radcliff made the following statement: "The Home Rule amendment passed by a majority of the voters at the November election grants a third term to county sheriffs. I believe that my record of the past four years speaks for itself and if the citizens of Pickaway-co desire a continuation of a straightforward, clean administration of the sheriff's office, I promise to faithfully execute my duties in the future as I have in the past."

JOHN G. WARD, Jr., age 39, 340 E. Union-st., born in Jackson-twp, May 21, 1895, youngest of a family of thirteen children of the late John G. Ward, Sr., and Clara Blacker Ward. He attended the country school in Jackson-twp and Everetts high school here. It was while playing football with the latter school that he was given the nickname of "Doggy," which has stuck to him ever since. He saw guard duty on the Mexican border in 1916 as a member of the old fourth Ohio National Guards. During the World War, he was a sergeant in the machine gun company of the 166th infantry, better known as the Rainbow Division. With this outfit, he saw 18 months service overseas. Returning home he took up farming, but quit in 1923 to become a grocery clerk, which position he held until 1925 when he became a bakery salesman. He served as a deputy under ex-Sheriff Frank Davis until January, 1931, and then became a special investigator for the county until March of the same year. He later became associated with the state prohibition department, later followed by work in the state beer and liquor control departments. He was relieved of his work in the liquor department on July 1, along with 47 other inspectors as the beer commission, under which he had been working, was taken over by the liquor control board. Mr. Ward says he "stands for law enforcement, economy in conducting the office of sheriff and courteous treatment to the public."

Law-board, Oils to Meet; Evens Win From Purina

The most important of the second half schedule for the Southern Ohio Oil Co. field this evening was the Container Corporation of America's Oil A. A. for the straw-boarders. The Oils have not been in the loop since several other teams lost only one game.

The expected Manager Roy Hegele, on the mound with a possibility that Al Baker will be in the box, however. The Container will present its full strength with H. Strawser catching, Trimmer on first, Whaley second, Evens shortstop, C. Bruns third, Braun left field, Watson center field and W. Bruns right field.

KEEP SAME LINEUP
Co-managers George Crum and Roy Conright will use their same lineup in an endeavor to win the Oil victory march. The first base, Merriman second, Trimmer shortstop, Walker third base, Barnes left field, H. White center field, and Leroy Moore right field.

Today evening the Containers will play the Mecca restaurant in the postponed game. The Oils continued their winning streak Wednesday evening by knocking out the Purina Chows in seven runs in the second inning. The score was 7 to 1. Bob Jones was as usually effective for the Oils giving only seven hits and scattering those. The Chows run came in the fourth inning.

The seven runs scored in the fourth were the result of a walk, a hit, an infield error, two hits, a walk, two more hits, a wild throw.

After scoring their runs the Oils laid back on their oars to rest their lead.

HOLLAND IS STAR
Purina, presented a new out-fielder Wednesday evening who really looked keen. It was Chuck Holland who patrolled the left and zone-like a veteran. He also looked pretty good with the stick.

Making a hole-in-one isn't much of a feat anymore, unless the shot is made in a national tournament and then it's something to shout about. Here is Pat Abbot, of Altadena, Cal., who scored a hole-in-one on a 248-yard hole during the national public links championship tournament at South Park links, Pittsburgh.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

ONE THING VERY NOTICEABLE in Wednesday evening's ball game between the Given Oils and the Purina Chows was that not a single new ball was thrown into play at any time during the game. There is a league rule that a new ball should be put in by each team each game, but that has been waived since the balls have been standing punishment pretty well. However, no team should expect a ball to be usable for three games—those used Wednesday were just plain punkins.

We want to hand a bunch of posies to Chuck Holland, who turned in some of the nicest outfielding it has been our pleasure to see this year—This youth, who tosses them from the portside and also swings that way, made one of the prettiest plays of the year when he snagged a low line drive with one hand in short left center field—Recreation ball fans should give Chuck Holland a good hand for his play—We hope it continues.

Some news from the Chillicothe front—It concerns Deb Rowan, former Ohio State football player, who has signed with the Louisville club of the newly-organized American pro grid league—Rowan expects to play with Father Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech-Portsmouth griddler, who is to coach the Louisville aggregation. Other teams in the league are expected to be St. Louis Gunners, Memphis Tigers, Tulsa Indians, Atlanta, Birmingham, Miami and New Orleans.

COACH ROY MILLER, HILLSBORO mentor for the past five years, has resigned his job to go to Fosteris succeeding Ed Edwards, who becomes assistant to Sam Williams at Western Reserve—Miller is a former Wittenberg star—He is reported to be receiving a nice increase in salary in his new position.

BIRDS WIN DUEL

COLUMBUS, Aug. 2.—The fourth-place Columbus Red Birds continued to swing along the American Association highway in a victory stride today after defeating St. Paul yesterday, by a 2 to 1 score.

With the win, the Birds won their fourth straight victory and counted their eighth win out of 11 contests played during the current home stay.

They also closed the gap between themselves and Milwaukee in third place. The Brewers now are only one half a game ahead of Columbus. The latter team was to meet St. Paul again today, weather permitting.

Uncle Sam's "Devil's Island" Ready for Guests

Cell block in the new prison

Uncle Sam's proposed "Devil's island" for dangerous criminals is almost ready for its guests. Situated in the broad Bay of San Francisco, surrounded by sheer cliffs and buffeted by strong tidal currents, Alcatraz island, site of the U. S. army's prison, has had a thorough housecleaning. Last year, when the wave of kidnapping caused government authorities to counter-attack, U. S. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings cast about for an "escape-proof" prison to house convicted gangsters, and found that Alcatraz island suited the needs. It was donated to the U. S. department of justice.

ROWE AND HARDER TO TANGLE TODAY

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—Two of the best pitchers in the American league were to face each other at League park here today as the Cleveland Indians attempted to even their present series with the Tigers and avenge yesterday's 10 to 7 defeat.

The pair of hurlers are Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, the 22-year-old right-hander who has won his last ten games, and Melvin Harder, whose winning streak now stands at nine.

Rowe yesterday put a stop to what looked like a thrilling finish to a listless baseball game. With the Tigers ahead 8 to 2 in the middle of the seventh, the "never-say-die" Indians pounded across three runs in their half of the frame, and though Detroit collected two in the eighth, so did the Tribe.

Then, in the last half of the ninth, after Seeds flied out, Clarence Phillips walked, Rice and Averill and allowed Vasmick to single the bases were loaded and a home run would have won the game, so Mickey Cochrane signaled for his star to save the day.

Hal Trosky faced the big youth first with a home run, a double and two singles already on his day's record. But Trosky struck out and Hale, another dangerous threat, did likewise.

The Cleveland boys made 14 hits but they left 16 runners on the bases. The pitching of Willis Hudlin, Belve Bean and Oral Hildebrand was not up to the par of Luke Hamlin, Phillips and Rowe, so the Tigers walked away with the contest and, incidentally, moved up into the first position in the league standings.

4 CROP CONTROL METHODS NOW USED

No Other Types of Plans Are Suggested By A. A. A. Planners.

There seem to be four possible methods of keeping the 15 or 20 million acres of averaged land out of crop production required for a balanced harvest, according to the planning division of the A. A. A.

These were listed recently by H. R. Tolley, chief of the division, before a group of farm people in Illinois. The first method is the voluntary adjustment plan with the benefit payments to assure an advantage to the cooperator over the non-cooperator, he said. This is the plan now being followed with wheat, tobacco, corn and hogs.

ARE VOLUNTARY
A second method is voluntary adjustment with disadvantages to those who refuse to cooperate. This is the plan now being followed with rice, through marketing agreements with millers. Under this plan, the millers hold back part of the fixed minimum price for the farmer's rice if he does not agree to take part in the adjustment program.

A device similar to this is contained in the Kerr Bill, which would tax tobacco marketed by non-cooperators. This plan, however, would be accompanied by contributions to benefit payments to co-operators.

Government buying of sub-marginal land is a third possible method. But, said Mr. Tolley, it would take an enormous amount of time to acquire the land required to affect commercial production adequately. There is also the problem of moving those people who wish to move, to lands rich enough to maintain them in reasonable economic security.

LIQUOR OR TAXATION
Compulsory control of production was the fourth method mentioned by Mr. Tolley. This might be license or taxation, he said, adding, "The Bankhead Act limiting the ginnings of cotton uses the taxation principle and provides for assigning a quota to every producer of cotton. While many were dubious about the use of taxation powers in this way, demand for the bill in all parts of the south proved so strong that the plan is now being given a trial."

"But there is no reason," Mr. Tolley concluded, "to abandon the voluntary principle in the rest of the country, implementing it with the centralizing power of the government."

Questions and Answers

So many people have purchased automatic refrigerators this season that the care and use of their refrigerators is frequently on their minds. This time we'll answer some of the questions that are asked most often.

How often should I defrost my refrigerator?

The instructions that come with your refrigerator will describe the thickness of the frost that may accumulate before it interferes with refrigeration. For a regular household task, defrosting once each week is recommended for greatest efficiency. When you defrost, the icy material melts off the chilling unit, and washes away the food odors that have accumulated on the frost. Regardless of the type of refrigerator you have, the chilling unit absorbs moisture from foods and withdraws moisture from the foods as well. An ordinary washing, or soda rinse will not entirely remove these odors, but defrosting and rinsing will.

Must all foods placed in an automatic refrigerator be covered?

Yes, all foods that do not have their own protective covering, should be covered. Left-overs may be placed in refrigerator dishes, or in glass jars with wide-mouthed tops. Waxed paper is very convenient to use for covering foods, and meats should be placed on another layer of waxed paper to prevent their drying out. The practice of covering foods is unquestioned by many housewives who would not think of storing food regardless of the cold, without covering.

How can I make frozen pop sticks in my own refrigerator? My youngsters like them, but I don't understand how to freeze them.

The frozen pop is made very much like ice cubes, pouring "pop" in the tray of the refrigerator, with the dividing sections. If longer than single sections, use a desired use the deep dessert tray without the horizontal division. Freeze until mushy, then insert small wooden skewers into each cube. Replace tray in chilling unit with space for the tray above empty to allow skewers to fit in. Freeze until solid. Loosen the sucker from the tray as you do ice cubes, running cold or warm water over the inverted tray.

How often should a porcelain lined refrigerator be cleaned?

It is impossible to be too clean about any storage space for food. If there is any food or liquid spilled in your refrigerator, wipe it up immediately. A weekly cleaning is advisable, using soapy water, if you desire, and rinsing carefully with clean water in addition to a soda rinse. Dry the inside of the refrigerator with a dry tea towel so that there is no additional moisture left in the box.

Refreshing Beverages

Sugar syrup is better for sweetening summer beverages than sugar. Make it by using equal quantities of sugar and water and boiling them gently for about 8 minutes. Use it for iced tea, fruit punches, and most any chilled drink.

Fruit Fizz

4 oranges
2 lemons
1/2 C. pineapple juice
1/2 C. maraschino cherries with juice
4 pts. sparkling white grape juice

Combine the juice of the oranges and lemons, add pineapple juice and the cherries and their juice. Chill until time of serving. Then add white grape juice. Pour over ice cubes in tall glasses. Makes 2 1/2 qts.

Blackberry Punch

1/2 C. boiling water 2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1/2 Tbsp. tea 2 Tbsp. orange juice
1/2 C. sugar 2 Few grains salt
1 C. blackberry 1 pt. charged water or ginger ale

Pour boiling water over tea, let stand 5 minutes, then strain over sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. When cold add fruit juices. Pour into glasses containing ice cubes, garnish with lemon and orange slices and dilute with ginger ale or charged water.
